

More and more, patients come to us looking for help as they question the aesthetics or function of recent dental work done outside our office. Dentistry is both science and art. Whether it's porcelain crowns, veneers, or dental implants, to have a successful outcome of any restorative service, you need:

- Meticulous upfront case planning
- Experienced, skillful, technically competent dentistry
- Exacting impressions and models
- Perfectly prepared teeth
- And ideally, an in-house lab that uses only top-quality materials

Through our practice, we offer you all these things - experienced personnel, skillful technicians, superior craftsmanship, and my personal one-to-one oversight of every case. Without these things, you can end up with a host of problems that include poor fit, over-contouring, inflammation, decay and tooth sensitivity. We don't want you to cut corners when it comes to your dental care – your teeth and smile are too important.

In good health,
